such a good book!! you are one of my favorite minecraft authors!! now for the book, ok so after failing to defend the his first village (zombies got them after the wall of the village fell, not sure how that happend) steve did not want to stay in the village it was cold and lonely, and Steve was afraid of ghosts so steve set out on the great, flat plains. after many hard ordeals and food poisoning, he found another village and when the villagers took him in there village with open arms he decided to defend this village like the first one, but doing a better job than before. when the village mayor took him around the village he befriended a villager blacksmith named bob who let's Steve stay in his house until Steve is healed from his injuries. Steve was going to upgrade the village defense like he did the first one but instead of building a wall he would dig a trench. all was going well until when steve was working on the trench at night a pack(or herd or school or mob HAHAAH or whatever) of zombies spotted him and, well they just kept on coming until they pushed him up against a random house and Steve was just about to die until the door opened up and Steve was saved by a girl villager named cindy. the next day Steve found out he was in need of materials to build his own house in the village so he went back to his first village to collect materials. when he comes back to his own the village elder told him how villagers are blessed with a special guardian that appears if the village is deemed worthy. for the village to be worthy they must have lots of trades and there crops must be prosperous and basically live a life of abundance. Steve thinks this would be alot of work and might take to long so the elder told him there is a way to build this guardian with 36 iron and a pumpkin.
